A thousand splendid sons literary criticism

It is well-known that parents will sacrifice almost anything for their children. They want what is best for them, so they tend to place their children above themselves. Parents give and give and never expect anything in return except the love from their kids. There is no limit to what a parent can sacrifice for their kids; it can even go as far as giving up their life. In "A Thousand Splendid Suns," the two protagonists, Mariam and Laila, blindly sacrifice their safety for the good of the ones they love. At the beginning of the story, the setting is set on the outskirts of the town where a woman, Nana, and her daughter, Mariam, live in a hut secluded from society. Mariam had lived her whole life not knowing that she was an illegitimate child...show more content...Because Mariam was incapable of having children, Rasheed bought himself a new wife, Laila, who was secretly pregnant with another man's baby. On the night that Laila was to consummate the marriage, she cut herself to make it seem like she was a virgin, and Rasheed believed it completely. After the baby, Aziza, was born, Rasheed resented her because it wasn't a son. He became absolutely intolerable to live with because of his harsh words and brutal beatings. From Rasheed's abuse, the unlikely allies of Mariam and Laila were born. They were stuck under the same roof with the same situation, so they decided to help each other out. Life, for them, was a living Hell, so at least they had each other to lean on. Years after Laila's second child, Zalmay, Rasheed came home extremely angry and started beating Mariam almost to the point of death, but not before Laila stepped in. Together, they fought and killed him for the sake of the safety of the children as well as their own well-being. This one action put them in serious danger because people would come after them for the murder of h-index (February 2018): 13 i10-index (February 2018): 19 h5-index (February 2018): 8 h5-median (February 2018): 13 Learn more Vaxi Chokshi Mrs. Sweeney Acad English IV 29th April 2014 The Fight for their Right Afghan women gained high visibility all over the world after the attacks on the World Trade Center and the Pentagon. Literary works focusing on Afghan culture began to be published shortly. They portrayed Afghan women as passive victims of war and violence. One such novel, A Thousand Splendid Suns by Khaled Hosseini, portrays the women of the Afghan culture. The story covers three decades of anti-Soviet jihad, civil war and Taliban tyranny as seen from the perspectives of two women. Its the soul-stirring connection between two victimized women that gives this novel its battered heart. More specifically, the novel utilizes feminist criticism to prove that Afghan men utilize, exploit, and avail their women The History of Afghanistan has been of political instability, war, infrastructure devastation, and limiting political regimes, says Azam Kazemiyani in his book. The streets were littered with glass, bodies and crumpled chunks of metal. The author describes the war-torn conditions of Afghanistan when he says, "There was looting, murder, and, increasingly, rape, which was used to intimidate civilians and reward militiamen. Mariam heard of women who were killing themselves out of fear of being raped, and of men who in the name of honor, would kill their wives or daughters if they'd been raped by the militia," (Hosseini, 247). This illustrates how women had no control over their own lives. Instead of getting justice for being raped, the fathers and husbands killed them. The militiamen misused their power to rape women and exercised their dominance over women. The condition of women in Afghanistan has been miserable since the start of Soviet Afghanistan... middle of paper ... f Mariam just injured Rasheed, he would have certainly killed Laila. Mariam could neither just stand there nor watch Rasheed kill Laila. The only choice left with her was killing him. In the case of Laila and Mariam domination and gender, exploitation is considered an appalling reason for social turmoil and triggering this type of fundamental social change comes when one cannot bare control any longer. Khaled Hosseini's book, "A Thousand Splendid Suns" portrays how women are dehumanized. More specifically, this book portrays how Afghan men utilize, exploit, and avail their women. Afghan women are denied their rights. Men are considered higher than women by their gender role. The pressure they face to abide by societal norms strains their individual lives and relationships. The narrator uses the feminist lens to describe social constraints on women within the novel. Ryan Ferkel Mrs. Reader Exploring Fiction 1/2/13 Literary Analysis of A Thousand Splendid Suns Growing up and living in Afghanistan as a woman has its challenges. Parents choose who can marry you and they choose everything for you. In this book, Laila and Mariam both show the struggles it is to be a girl, and how much disrespect they get in Afghanistan. Both Mariam and Laila are married to the same man, and he is abusive to both of them. They also live under Taliban rule, and the rules that they set are very unfair for women. In Khaled Hosseini's novel, he has many different themes but the most prevalent one is of woman inequality, and that is shown through multiple accounts of abuse, disrespect, and unfairness. While living in A Thousand Splendid Suns (2007), written by Khaled Hosseini deals with the political scenario of Soviet-Afghan war that strike in 1980's and the coming of the Taliban in 1996. The themes includes violence, women in Afghanistan, spousal abuse, resistance to victimization, war, Afghan life, marriage. The novel is an epic of the country because it shows the impact of the political upheaval on the private space of the community. The Afghan and Soviet war had a profound impact on Kabul, the capital of Afghanistan. Fariba and Hakim and her daughter had to displace to Pakistan due to the release of Bombs in Kabul. The pessimistic view of Kabul is seen in parallel contrast to the pessimism of Fariba. The significant impact of the war was that it destroyed the family of Laila and her friend Giti. Laila's family was destroyed by the bomb and she was fortunately saved. Her friend Giti was also a victim of the bomb blasts. It throws light into the situation of the war and its impact on the private space of life. In addition to this, the rise of Taliban in the year 1996 also have a great impact on Kabul. The Taliban asked woman to wear "Purdah" and burqa while going outside. Many laws were created and imposed on the woman and education was restricted to them. Similarly, Laila and Mariam wanted to escape from the harsh oppression from Rasheed was unable to escape due to Taliban strict laws. It left no choice for them and they were left back to Rasheed's house who abuses them physically. Moreover, the condition of woman in the Afghanistan is clearly depicted. Mariam was a victim of patriarchal oppression and she was forcefully married to Rasheed. She was oppressed in Rasheed's house and he forcefully had a sexual intercourse with her against her consent. It is also important to note that the objectification of woman was at its peak. Rasheed said to Mariam that "a woman's face is her husband's business" and gives her a burqa to wear. Woman were objectified as an object in the Afghan society. Laila's patriarchal space in the family of Rasheed suffered from physical abuse and Aziza was made to beg on the streets by Rasheed to meet the demands of a boy Hamza. It becomes important to note that that the patriarchal society in Afghan society demands a boy rather than a girl child. After the situation of 9/11 in America the situation in Afghan got worse and Aziza was left to an orphanage which clearly indicates that the girl child is unwelcome in the family of Afghan society. Mariam lives with her mother, Nana on the outskirts of Herat, in a small village named Gul Daman. Mariam's mother refers to her as a "harami" (bastard) and made her feel as if she wasn't wanted from the beginning of her life. Mariam thought that she as a person would never have a "legitimate claim to the things other people had, things such as love, family, home, and acceptance." Mariam's mother was a housekeeper for her father, Jalil, a rich businessman who at the time already had children and three wives. Mariam's father kicked Nana out of his house when she became pregnant and built her the kolba they live in, along with the help of his sons. Jalil came to visit and spend time with Mariam every Thursday. Mariam looked forward to these visits every week, she loved her father and looked up to him. Although Nana never said anything to reflect how she felt about Jalil while he was there, she never failed to show the built up resentment she had towards him when he would leave. Mariam had a tutor, Mullah Faizullah who she was very close with, nobody understood her like him. He encourages Mariam to learn and tries to talk to Nana for her about going to school. For Mariam's birthday, she asked her father to take her to his cinema to see the movie - Pinocchio, but he never showed to pick her up. After letting some time past, Mariam decided to walk into town to look for Jalil only to find his house and sit outside all night because he refused to let her in. Jalil's wives couldn't stand having his bastard child around so they arranged a marriage for her, to a man named Rasheed, a shoemaker who lives in Kabul. Shortly after moving in with him, Mariam became pregnant and felt a happiness she had never felt. "When Mariam thought of this baby, her heart swelled inside of her. It swelled and swelled until all the loss, all the grief, all the loneliness and self-abasement of her life washed away." Rasheed and Mariam visited a bathhouse and Mariam had a miscarriage. In the next 4 years, Mariam experienced six more miscarriages. At this point, Mariam could do no right to please her husband, he was beating on her and she lived in complete fear of him. She felt that she had failed him seven times. At the end of Part 1, Mariam made her husband dinner and he believed the rice was too hard so he made her chew pebbles until he left, leaving her to spit out blood and broken teeth.
